The editorial office has been informed that the inclusion of Robert Greenstein's name in a discussion of the work that led to the passage of the Food Stamp Act of 1964 was in error. The text has been amended online as follows:

On page S108, the first two sentences now read:

Although the FSP and farm bills were not combined initially, Freeman was heavily involved in legislative negotiations. An arrangement was ultimately worked out in which FSP excluded only purchases of alcohol, and the farm bill moved forward.

On page S109, the last sentence of the section beginning “Last Major Expansion: The Food and Agricultural Act of 1977” now reads:

Robert Greenstein, the Food and Nutrition Service administrator, and a series of congressmen led this effort (Senators George McGovern, Jacob Javits, Bob Dole, and Humphrey and Congressmen Mark Foley and Frederick Richmond).
